

NATIVIDAD PERAMOS SOLER was born in Tenerife, Spain. She is an Assistant Professor in the Italian Language and Literature Department of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (Greece). Her specialty is "Spanish as a Foreign Language and Spanish Dialectology". She studied at the Department of Spanish Philology in the University of La Laguna (ULL) (1993-1998), specializing in linguistics. She continued her studies at a doctoral program (1998-2000) in postgraduate level (Department of Spanish Philology, ULL). She defended her doctoral thesis at the same institution and received the title of doctor with the qualification "Outstanding cum laude", honorable mention as Doctor Europeus (December 2009). In Greece she has collaborated with several university institutions: Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (AUTH), National and Capodistrian University of Athens (EKPA), Hellenic Open University (EAP). Specifically, from 2003 to 2011 she worked in the Department of Italian Language and Literature at AUTH where she taught Spanish. In the Department of Italian Language and Philology at AUTH in 2016, she also taught "Greek-Spanish Reverse Translation in the graduate program "Science of Language and Culture: Translation, Communication, and Editing". Between 2017-2018 she taught the subjects "Spanish Language A1" and "Phonetics and Phonology" and in 2019 she taught "Spanish Language A2" and "Phonetics and Phonology". She has also collaborated with the National Center for Public Administration and Local Government (EKDDA) in the program of Foreign Languages and Interdepartmental Courses for the supervision of the educational material, 2nd Special Phase of Studies "Alexandros Svolos". From 2005 to the present, she works as a Collaborating Professor (SEP) in the subjects ISP20 (Spanish Language, level III) and/or ISP11 (Spanish Language, level II) in the undergraduate study program "Spanish Language and Culture" of the EAP. From October 2015 to June 2017, she taught ELE classes at the EKPA University's Foreign Languages Teaching Center. She is also evaluating and grades exams for Cervantes Institute (DELE), the Ministry of Education (KPG-State Certificate of Language Proficiency) and she collaborated in the preparation of manuals with EKPA for the KPG exams. She has been an invited speaker in training seminars for Spanish teachers in Greece and abroad as well as a visiting professor at universities in Spain. She belongs to the recognized research group (GIR) of the University of Valladolid (UVA), Spain: European languages: teaching / learning, intercultural pragmatics and linguistic identity. Her research interests focus on topics related to Spanish, dialectology, grammatical and comparative analysis, Spanish phraseology, error analysis, the teaching of Spanish as a foreign language and the training of Spanish teachers. She also reviews international scientific journals: Revista de Filología, Universidad de la Laguna, (Spain) and Zona Próxima Universidad del Norte, Colombia.